Work Description

In this interview, Dr. George Huffman calls himself a classic weather person, in part because by the fourth grade in North Central Ohio, he already was excited about the prospect of a job studying weather. At the NASA Goddard Space Flight Center, Huffman focuses on global rainfall, mostly from satellite, though he says he'll shamelessly use gauge analysis when necessary.

The data he gathers help fine as a scale as possib crop forecasting, drought	le. This information	can apply to prac	ctical uses such as p	oredicting landslides,
